Information Regarding Excess Contributions And Their Removal.

The issues surrounding excess contributions can be complex and vary according to each person's situation. The information provided here is only a summary of the excess contribution rules. Consult Internal Revenue Services (IRS) Publication 590, IRS Notice 2000-39, Internal Revenue Code (IRC) 408(d) and 408(d)(5), or your tax advisor for advice in applying the excess contribution removal rules to your situation.

Note: If you are requesting the removal of the excess contribution near your tax filing deadline, you may want to consider filing for an extension (IRA Form 4868) so you will have all the necessary figures for your return and to ensure the excess removal is complete. Although the deadline is generally your tax return due date, if you timely filed your return without withdrawing the excess, you may still make the withdrawal no later than six months after the due date of your tax return (normally October 15), excluding extensions. If you use this process, you just file an amended return with "Filed pursuant to Section 301.9100-2" written at the top. Report any related earnings for the year of the amended return and include an explanation of the withdrawal.

Who Should Use This Form?

Anyone who has made an excess contribution to a Traditional IRA, Roth IRA, Rollover IRA, SEP IRA or Coverdell Education Savings account and wants to request the removal of the excess contribution and any applicable earnings from a JPMorgan Funds Account.

How Much Money Should Be Removed?

You will need to notify JPMorgan Funds of the excess amount and the tax years(s) for which the contribution(s) was made.

What Is An Excess Contribution?

Generally, an excess contribution is defined as:

- The amount contributed to your IRA (Traditional, Roth, Rollover, SEP or Coverdell Savings Account) for a taxable year that exceeds the lesser of:
-100% of your U.S. earned income for that year, or
-That year's prescribed limit ($5,000 and $6,000 if you are age 50 1/2 or older in 2008)
- The amount contributed to your Roth IRA that exceeds the allowable limit based upon your Roth modified adjusted gross income (Roth MAGI). Please see IRS Publication 590 for the specific limitations.
- Contributions made to a Traditional IRA for the year in which you reach age 70 1/2 and for any later year.
- An improper rollover contribution or a contribution based on compensation that is not eligible for an IRA contribution.

JPMorgan Funds will calculate the earnings on the excess contribution, if appropriate, according to the "new" method as defined in IRS Notice 2000-39. This method requires that the excess contribution earnings be calculated based on the entire JPMorgan Funds IRA portfolio and not just the individual fund that received the excess.

For example: if you made an excess contribution to a Traditional IRA account in Fund X, but also have in IRA funds Y and Z, the earnings for the excess contribution must be calculated based on the earnings of all three funds for the specified period-even if no contributions were made to the other funds.

The computation period is the period beginning immediately prior to the time the particular contribution was made to the IRA and ending immediately prior to the removal of the contribution being returned.

In the case of multiple contributions to an IRA, the last contribution made to the IRA for a particular taxable year is deemed to be the contribution that is returned (up to the amount identified by the IRA owner as being an excess contribution).

Who Is Responsible For Determining If An Excess Contribution Has Been Made?

The IRA account owner is responsible for assuring that the amount contributed is not in excess of the prescribed limitations. The IRS may assess the individual taxpayer penalties for failure to meet the rules. For this reason, you should review your account statements carefully and verify the contributions made to your accounts.

If earnings must be removed, but you do not want JPMorgan Funds to calculate the earnings, you may provide JPMorgan Funds with the associated earnings by attaching additional instructions. By signing in Section 5, you indemnify JPMorgan Funds and certify that any information you provide is accurate and true.

What Is The Penalty For Not Removing The Excess Contribution?

The IRS levies a penalty of 6% on the excess contribution amount unless it is removed along with the earnings prior to the due date of the investor's tax return (normally April 15), including any extensions. In addition, the earnings on the excess contribution may be subject to a 10% penalty and you may need to complete IRS Form 5329 and attach it to your tax return. Please consult IRS Publication 590 or IRC 408(d)(4) for further details.

The 6% penalty is applicable for each year the excess remains in the IRA account.

What If The Market Value Of My Plan Has Gone Down?

If the overall market value of your JPMorgan Funds IRA portfolio has decreased, this means you have been at a negative earnings rate for the specified period. Due to this negative condition, the entire amount of the original excess contribution may not need to be withdrawn.

What If The Market Value Of My Plan Has Gone Up?

If the overall market value of your JPMorgan Funds IRA portfolio had increased and the excess is being removed prior to your tax return due date, the amount of the excess contribution and the applicable earnings will be withdrawn.

What If I Don't Have Enough Money In The Account Where I Made My Original Contribution?

If there are not sufficient shares in the original account, we will follow the redemption hierarchy you outline in Section 3 of the form. Please be sure to include your daytime and evening phone numbers in case we need to confirm or clarify your instructions.

How Long Should The Removal Process Take?

The calculation and processing of your request is generally a two-to three-day process. The redemption of the excess and any applicable earnings will be based on the fund's net asset value (NAV) the day your request was received in good order.

Will I Receive A Confirmation That The Excess And Any Applicable Earnings Were Removed?

You will receive a statement confirming the return of the excess contribution and earnings. If the proceeds are to be credited to another JPMorgan Funds account, you will also receive a confirmation regarding that investment or contribution. IRS Form 1099-R will also be issued for the year in which the excess contribution was removed from your IRA. Form 1099R will be issued for the calendar year of the distribution, even if the distribution was made to correct an excess contribution made the prior year.

Will Earnings Be Automatically Removed?

You must instruct us whether or not the excess is being removed in a timely manner in accordance with IRS regulations. If your request is prior to your tax filing deadline (including extensions) for the tax year for which the excess was contributed, then you should check "Yes" in Section 2 for that contribution. If you have timely filed your taxes for the tax year the excess was contributed, but you will be filing a proper amended return, then you should also check "Yes" in Section 2 for that contribution. If you file an amended return, it must be submitted to the IRS within six months after the due date of your tax return (normally October 15) and you must write "Filed pursuant to Section 301.9100-2" at the top. If you checked "Yes" in Section 2 for any of your excess contributions, JPMorgan Funds will automatically calculate the associated earnings (unless provided by you) and remove them as well. If you did not timely file your return or if it is later than 6 months after your original filing date (normally October 15th) JPMorgan Funds will distribute the amount equal to your excess contributions. Net income is not calculated after this deadline.

How Will JPMorgan Funds Report The Removal To The IRS?

For distribution of an excess contribution, plus its earnings, which is removed prior to your tax return due date (including extensions), there is a special distribution code reported on IRS Form 1099-R. A code of either "8" or "P" will be used, depending on the year for which any earnings are taxable. If an excess contribution is removed without associated earnings after your tax filing deadline (including extensions), then a code of "1" or "7" is used, depending on the age of the IRA owner. These requirements are explained more fully in the IRS Instructions for Form 1099-R and 5498.

Information Will JPMorgan Funds Need To Remove My Excess And Applicable Earnings?

You will need to provide us with the following information concerning the excess contribution: The tax year and amount of the excess contribution(s) and the fund and account number where the excess contribution was originally made. Indicate if the request is being made prior to your tax filing deadline (including extensions) for the tax year that the excess was contributed. You will need to sign (as your name appears in the registration) the authorization requesting the removal of the excess contribution and any applicable earnings; a signature guarantee may be required in some situations. See Section 5 of the form for the conditions.
