- Contingent convertible bonds (“CoCos”), are a type of debt instrument that automatically convert into equity when the issuer’s capital falls below a certain threshold, providing a buffer during financial distress. They offer higher yields compared to traditional bonds but come with increased risk due to their conversion feature.
- The Investment Manager believes that permitting increased investment in CoCos would be in the best interests of investors as the asset class becomes more prominent in fixed income markets and presents a growing opportunity for better risk-adjusted returns.
- For information on the risks involved with investing in CoCos, please ‘Risk Descriptions’ in the JPMorgan Funds prospectus.

Key dates

The changes are being made to the relevant prospectus or Key Investor Document (KID), revised versions of which will be available at www.jpmorganassetmanagement.lu. As with all Fund investments, it is important to understand and remain familiar with the relevant KID(s). Other than the period when switch and redemption fees are waived, note that all other switch and redemption conditions and restrictions in the prospectus still apply.

Please be advised that the latest version of the prospectus and articles of incorporation as well as copies of the latest annual and semi annual report are available free of charge upon request at the registered office of the Fund or from the Fund local representative. The latest version of the Prospectus is also available on the website www.jpmorganassetmanagement.com.
